Hans Asbjørn Aaheim is a senior research fellow in the Center for International Climate and Environmental Research-CICERO since 1993, addressing costs and benefits of climate policies, decision making under uncertainty, and adaptation to increasing frequencies of extreme events

Before CICERO he was employed by Statistics Norway from 1978 to 1992, where he worked primarily on the management of national wealth and income from natural resources.

Besides being research director for the Climate Economics Unit at CICERO in later years, most of my work has been related to the development and use of a global general equilibrium model, GRACE, where impacts of climate change are integrated. In doing so, particular attention has been on the development tools to include national and macroeconomic perspectives in analyses of local adaptation.
